

Ontario colleges form commission

The recent formation of the Ontario College Confederation (OCC) has been hailed by students as a "revolutionary breakthrough."

Don Leroy (Eds), president of Georgian College, was the first to this when he was the commission formed. It is the "first."

At present, the OCC represents 12 of the 33 community colleges in the province and is expected to be the Ontario Federation of Students (OFS).

The decision to form the commission is a "revolutionary breakthrough," says Don Leroy (Eds), president of Georgian College, who was the first to this when he was the commission formed. It is the "first."

The newly formed commission should bring college students more united. They believe common problems will allow them to work more effectively together.

There is a need to have a provincial government which represents the community in relation to college students and to allow them to have a voice in the government.

They said the first step was to create the OCC. The commission is expected to be the Ontario Federation of Students (OFS).

However, the school authorities in each school are expected to work together.
